"As soon as Mr. Curtis's work is published

"As soon as Mr. Curtis's work is published, the present generation will have a much miler and more completely rounded conception of this extraordinary man than was possessed by his immediate contemporaries.

"Mr. Webster will again come into view as perhaps the foremost man of this century on the American Continent. It was he that supplied the ideas which triumphed in the late war for the Union. "The Union now and forever, one and inseparable." was a sentiment which he had so infused into all ingenuous hearts that they were ready to pour out every drop of their blood in its sapport. He is the one man without whom success could not have been achieved."—N. F. World.
